This is the face of radical Islam. If the UN is looking for a genocide to investigate, here it is. Not in Israel.

Horrific. Gruesome. Inhuman. The civilized world has condemned the beheading of American journalist James Foley by the terrorist beasts of ISIS.

It was followed by the public execution of 22 Palestinians, including two women, by Hamas on charges of collaboration. Executed, without trial, in cold blood.

These acts of barbarism are only the latest ghastly examples of the monstrous enemy, radical Islam, that is threatening humanity.

In Iraq and Syria, ISIS is now beheading and crucifying children in its genocidal war against Christians, Yazidis, and anyone else in the way of their caliphate.

In Iran, the gay-hating, women-stoning, free-speech-suppressing mullahs continue to fund murderous attacks against Americans and Jews worldwide, threatening Israel with nuclear annihilation.

And in Gaza, bloodthirsty Hamas terrorists fire rockets at Israelis from homes, schools and mosques. Hamas sacrifices Palestinian babies as human shields, and uses Palestinian children as slave labor to build terror tunnels in its never-ending genocidal war against the Jews.

But with mass murder throughout the Islamic world, Ban Ki-moon continues his Israel-condemnation addiction. He castigates the Middle East's only democracy as it acts in self-defense against the Hamas death cult.

His repeated statements of moral equivalency between Hamas and Israel are despicable and an affront to decency. A recent bipartisan letter from U.S. Senators to Ban Ki-moon scolded his comparison of the "deliberate terrorist attack on civilians" by Hamas to the "measured response of a nation-state trying to defend its citizens." Even a Palestinian Authority official compared Hamas to ISIS.

If Ban Ki-moon wants to mobilize United Nations' resources to investigate genocide, he should focus on where genocide is really taking place. Not on Israel.

And if the Secretary-General continues to misuse the UN, Americans – who pay one-fifth of the UN budget – should ask themselves why they fund an organization whose chief cannot distinguish right from wrong.

Ban Ki-moon should focus on real genocides in the Middle East, stop persecuting Israel the region's only democracy, and stop making suckers of the American taxpayer.
